Lexicon Systems, LLC Helps to Plan Air & Waste Management Association's Centennial Activities

Houston, TX – Lexicon Systems, LLC announced today that Jill Barson Gilbert, President & CEO, has been named to the Centennial Committee of the Air & Waste Management Association. The Association was founded in 1907 in Pittsburgh, PA as the Smoke Prevention Association, later become the Air Pollution Control Association, and changed its name to the Air & Waste Management Association in the mid-1980s to reflect the growing environmental field. The Association plans a year of centennial celebrations in 2007, with its Annual Conference & Exhibition in Pittsburgh as a highlight.

Gilbert is a Fellow Member and has served the Association in many capacities from the local level to the international level during her 25-year tenure. She is a past Vice President and Board Member, currently serves on the EM magazine Editorial Advisory Board, and authors the bimonthly "IT Insight" column for EM. She stated, "I am honored to be included in the Centennial planning efforts, surrounded by many past presidents and leaders of the Association."

About the Air & Waste Management Association
